

BBC News | Technology | UK Edition

Source: http://newsrss.bbc.co.uk/rss/newsonline_uk_edition/technology/rss.xml

Updated: 11-22

Update this feed

UK climate unit's e-mails hacked

The e-mail system of one of the world's leading climate research units has been breached by hackers.

YouTube gets automatic subtitles

Automatic captions for YouTube videos are to roll out across its channels, says parent company Google.

Facebook acts on follower trade

Social networking site Facebook has threatened legal action against a site that sells friends and followers.

Dell sees quarterly profits fall

US computer giant Dell reports another decline in its quarterly profits, sending its shares 7% lower.

Google previews operating system

Internet search giant Google previews its Chrome OS operating system, to be available to users by the end of 2010.

CD player production ends at Linn

A manufacturer of hi-fi systems sounds what it says could be the death knell of the compact disc player.

Twitter urges Murdoch to be open

Newspapers should become "radically open" if they want to make money in the online world, the co-founder of Twitter says.

First test for record solar plane

The prototype of a solar-powered plane destined for a record round-the-world journey makes its first trip across a runway.

China military site draws hackers

A website set up by China's Ministry of National Defense attracts 2.3million hack attempts in its first four weeks online.

Tiny chip could diagnose disease

A simple and cheap approach to diagnosing a wide array of medical conditions has been demonstrated by researchers.

Set to stun: scientists test 'phaser' on worms

Scientists show off an effect not unlike that of "phasers" in Star Trek - but it only works on tiny worms called nematodes.

Nasa game lets web users explore Mars for themselves

Nasa launches a website that allows users to play games while at the same time sorting through its image archive of Mars.

Get your up-to-date fix of blog posts about all things digital

dot.life

Do the plans to tackle illegal file-sharers add up?

Crime time

Why the police are turning to Twitter and Facebook

Panel power

Solar power technology comes of age.

After the hype

Once it was huge, but what happened to Second Life?

Computer curse

The man who wrote the first ever computer virus

Public humiliation

Sex, drugs and breakdowns for net pioneer

Government lays out digital plans

The government outlines a bill in the Queen's Speech for the country's digital future including plans to tackle illegal file-sharers.

Sony aims to return TVs to profit

Sony says it aims to make its LCD TV operations profitable in the financial year starting next April as it continues to cut costs.

Night vision scopes see daylight

How British troops are able to see in the dark

Ordnance Survey maps to go online

The government announces plans to make Ordnance Survey mapping data available free of charge online.

California to ban power-hungry TVs

Energy-hungry television sets will soon be banned across California, in a landmark move by state legislators to reduce energy consumption.

Two held in global PC fraud probe

Two suspected hackers are arrested in an investigation into a computer virus designed to steal banking information.

Medical debut for smart band aid

Clinical trials of a smart plaster - a sensor-studded band aid that wirelessly monitors vital signs - begin.

Network sites 'need help buttons'

Social networking websites are criticised for failing to introduce a help button for children being bullied online.

T-Mobile staff sold personal data

Staff at mobile firm T-Mobile sold millions of records from thousands of customers, a spokesman confirms.

Worlds apart

We need atoms as well as bits, says Bill Thompson

Social media challenges society

How social media challenges age-old social rules

An internet that speaks to you

Bill Thompson welcomes moves to make the net multi-lingual.

Is e-democracy a good thing?

Digital Britain requires a pause for thought, writes Bill Thompson

Wikipedia's future in Africa

Net encyclopaedia Wikipedia to expand in Africa

Strength in science collaboration

Scientists use social networking to collaborate

Europe fights Google's book plans

Europe fights Google's book plans

A 360 degree net experience

How to make a virtual video tour

Digital Revolution

Internet Blog

www.feedbooks.com
Food for the mind