Could Your Pricey Designer Clothes Burn Your Skin or Give You Cancer?

Think that avoiding cheap, throwaway clothes and sticking with brand names means that your wardrobe is safe from dangerous toxins? Think again. Chinese inspectors randomly sampling department stores and boutiques in the southeast China province of Zhejiang found that a dizzying 60 percent of garments made outside of China suffered from poor colorfastness, high levels of acid or even contained formaldehyde. And you might recognize some of the offenders' names – Dolce & Gabbana, Hugo Boss, Hermes, Trussardi, and Versace.

Hot Chip – “I Feel Better” Video

Hot Chip made some of my favorite videos of the last decade, because they’ve got great taste in directors and they do both conceptual and humorous really well. And when your singer’s voice is as fragile and tender as Alexis Taylor’s, the humor stops everything from getting too precious. “I Feel Better,” directed by UK comedian Peter Serafinowicz, may be their best video yet, and it’s got an ending worth sticking around for. It’s also the perfect response to anyone who says Hot Chip sound “too pop” on One Life Stand.

One Life Stand is out now via Astralwerks.

Who Wants To Be A Millionaires?

This guy is called the Lottery Guru, and as you will see, he is clearly very rich and has definitely got millions of dollars in the bank. He also has a ton of tips for how we can all win the lottery, and he shares them in this video, I guess as a charity. Lord knows, for the Lottery Guru, it's not about the money at this point. Holy cow. I am really excited about this, you guys. It's going to be awesome to be so rich.

What are you guys going to do with all the money that you are definitely going to win by following these super useful tips? I'm going to buy a hover-mansion in the nice part of space. And a PT Cruiser, FULLY LOADED. And an Apple iPad. And a special garbage can that is just for throwing away my Apple iPads. And then I'm going to become a philanthropist.
